My friend Perry Gamsby has spent nearly 20 years experiencing the Philippines. He has been involved in several businesses including a bar on Malapascua Island and the family piggery, been involved with property purchases, lived in the city and in the boondocks, worked plotting sites of interest for Philippines EZ Maps, worked for an advertising company and has appeared in promotional videos. He has experienced the schooling system, medical treatment, transport system and life in general throughout the Philippines. Perry has been in and out of love many times but is now happily married to a beautiful Filipina and has five daughters.

While living in the Philippines he wrote a number of books, including three excellent guidebooks on marriages between westerners and Filipinas. Filipina 101, Filipina 202 and Filipina 303.

He's Australian, and writes from an Australian's perspective. Very practical and no-nonsense and with a refreshing lack of "political correctness" and a superb larrikin humour that only an Aussie can manage.
