

The process of going through a spousal visa application for a couple can be extremely stressful. This is because it so completely throws the future into uncertainty. In addition to this the process is difficult and convoluted by beurocratic requirements. It is essential for these reasons to find an agent who is responsive and addresses your concerns as they come to pass and who knows the mythical intricacies of immigration procedure. Throughout jeff and mila's period of assistance they were on top of all the requirements and responded to every email and phonecall promptly.

We are extremely appreciative that this period is OVER.... and doubt it would have been resolved so expeditiously without their help. We are really grateful and looking forward to the future which is now, so far as residency is concerned, settled and certain. We strongly recommend down under visa to anyone going through the process and would only say to couples going through it themselves that you do get through it with persistence and fortitude.
